

BREAKING NEWS Runaway bull caught at NY college, then saved by Jon Stewart Apr. 2, 2016 - 8:39 AM ET
BROOKLYN TODAY How The Gaza War Made This Brooklyn Artist Commit Her Life To Activism

Facebook
Twitter
Google+
Email
Print
More

 The Best Care Right Her... 🕒 🔗

Landmarks Preservation Commission says yes to Crown Heights 'country house' rescue plan

The Landmarks Preservation Commission okayed this remodeling plan for Crown Heights' decrepit 1375 Dean St. Photo montage by NC2 Architecture via the Landmarks Preservation Commission

By Lore Croghan
Brooklyn Daily Eagle

Finally!

A historic Crown Heights house that came this close to being demolished a decade ago had its restoration plan greenlighted Tuesday by the city Landmarks Preservation Commission (LPC).

At a public meeting at the preservation agency's Lower Manhattan headquarters, commissioners decided by unanimous vote that revised remodeling plans for the George B. and Susan Elkins House at 1375 Dean St. passed muster, after earlier plans had failed to garner support this past September.

"It's been a very long journey,"

BDE TWITTER FEED

Amber Mazor, the developer who owns the house, told the Brooklyn Eagle after the vote. "I'm very excited and happy."

According to city Finance Department records, Mazor has owned the decrepit landmark through an LLC since October 2014, when he purchased it for $995,000.

Now, having received the LPC's backing for his plan, he can save the Greek Revival-Italianate home, which is the only free-standing mid-19th Century wooden country house that still exists in northwest Crown Heights.

"It's been an eyesore for a long time. It's time to stop the neglect and bring back the glory of this neglected jewel," Mazor said.

This is landmarked 1375 Dean St. as it now looks, pre-renovation. Eagle photo by Lore Croghan

He told the Eagle he expects to start working on 1375 Dean's restoration in the spring. First he must obtain permits from the city Department of Buildings.

The house, constructed between 1855 and 1869, will be clad in Hardie boards, he said, which are fiber cement planks that look like clapboard. The clapboard look-alike will be light gray and window shutters will be dark gray.

Mazor said he is basing the restoration on photos taken in the 1940s.

An aside: Mazor recently completed the restoration of 1372 Dean St., an 1880s-vintage brick home that's right across the street from the George B. and Susan Elkins House. Condos at 1372 Dean went on the sale market last month.

But back to the subject of the wooden country house at 1375 Dean St.

The major bone of contention concerning renovation designer NC2 Architecture's original plan, presented at a September public hearing, was wall extensions made of glass that were to be built in the two tiny side yards that flank the house.

Because Mazor intends to convert the two-family house into a four-unit residential building, city zoning regulations require that the side yards be filled in — or enlarged, which is of course impossible.

At Tuesday's public meeting, LPC staffers said the city Board of Standards and Appeals had been contacted, but had indicated that 1375 Dean was not a good candidate for a zoning variance. The Buildings Department also made it clear that the house would have a hard time getting an exemption from the regulations.

So architect Richard Goodstein came up with a new design for the side yard wall extensions. It consists of screens made of dark-colored horizontal slats standing in front of faux-clapboard walls with windows.

The screens are a dark color to make them recede from view.

Prior to the vote, Commissioner Frederick Bland expressed frustration that other city agencies wouldn't work with the LPC on the issue of the side yard wall extensions.

"What's bugging me is that we do not have the ability to do the right thing by this house," he said.

In 2006, a previous owner was going to tear down the historic house. Finance Department records identify him as Raymond Agoglia, who had just purchased the property for $800,000.

Thanks to the efforts of the Crown Heights North Association, the LPC held an emergency session and designated the George B. and Susan Elkins House an individual city landmark. Its protected status put a stop to the demolition.

December 15, 2015 - 1:00pm

Facebook Twitter Google+ Email Print More

Related Articles

A Crown Heights North demolition, renovation and sale checklist

Gone Baby Gone. A Crown Heights North house was demolished recently in an area that has been calendared for consideration as a historic district, but not designated. It was part of the historic fabric of the neighborhood — and worth preserving. ... Full Article

Landmarks Preservation Commission says No to redesign plan for decaying Crown Heights 'country house'

Will the sad little landmark with the big price tag ever be repaired? ... Full Article

Sponsored

The Only 2 Sites You Need to Know About When Building a Website

Top 10 Best Website Builders

The Ultimate Way to Get Cheap Hotel Rooms

Save70

The most addictive game of the year! Play with 14 million Players now!

Forge Of Empires - Free Online Game

SECRET RULES! - For Disneyland Employees

Viral Heroes

Want to Prevent Cancer? Put These 8 Foods on Your Plate

HealthMindBodies

15 Photos Of The Amazon That Will Give You Jungle Fever

TravelTips4Life

Tweets by @BklynEagle

Brooklyn Daily Eagle
@BklynEagle

#Cuomo's threat to stick #NYC with $800 million Medicaid, #CUNY costs fizzles in new budget. @BilldeBlasio brooklyneagle.com/articles/2016/...

25m

Brooklyn Daily Eagle
@BklynEagle

'Gridlock' Sam explains @MoveNewYork to the Eagle, says it's a 'big win' for #Brooklyn brooklyneagle.com/articles/2016/...

14h

Brooklyn Daily Eagle
@BklynEagle

In Public Service: @SenMartyGolden says #GOP should be big tent party brooklyneagle.com/articles/2016/...

17h

Brooklyn Daily Eagle
@BklynEagle

#NYC folks will be getting $15 wage before other #NYS people. Details about wage, family leave, tax cuts and more. brooklyneagle.com/articles/2016/...

18h

Embed View on Twitter

Most Popular

Most Viewed	Most Commented	Most Shared
Past: 1 day	1 week	1 month	1 year
1. In Public Service: Golden says GOP should be big tent party
2. 'Gridlock' Sam explains Move NY to the Eagle, says it's a 'big win' for Brooklyn
3. About Us
4. Know Your Cycle Rights: Bike law basics
5. Cobble Hill still awaiting answers from Fortis, NYU about LICH plans

Join the discussion...

Brandon Myers • 4 months ago

This is great news!!!! Landmarks finally came to their senses.
After many tried and ended up abandoning this project this is very exciting to see progress.
Everything looks great and I'm looking forward to see this amazing building restored. Good job!

^

|

▼

•

Reply

•

Share

›

